

Heutagogy WORKSHOP

Dr Stewart Hase BA, Dip Psych, MA (hons), PhD. MAPS. is a registered psychologist interested in human adaption and change. He is a therapist, academic, writer, educator and organisational consultant. Stewart has an international reputation in the area of learning, which is at the heart of change.

Stewart is the editor of two recent books: Self-Determined Learning: Heutagogy in Action and Experiences in Self-Determined Learning (Amazon and Kindle -2014). Plus several published papers and book chapters, blogs and presentations.

Self-determined learning (heutagogy) Self-determined learning is an approach to learning, based on brain research, that is revolutionising education and training. In short, almost everything we have thought works in designing learning programs, does not work. This workshop is for trainers and educators who want to improve their practice and use approaches that really enhance learning, that are dynamic and learner-focused. Stewart was one of the originators of self-determined learning in 2000 and has published a number of papers and two books on the subject, as well as presenting workshops and addresses nationally and internationally.
